Democratic Party for a New Society (DPNS) and Youth for a New Society (YNS) in the Spring Revolution Feb 2021 – Feb 2022

Introduction

A revolution is happening in Burma. People from across the country, from all walks of life, ethnicities and religions have joined the revolution in one form or another: inspired by the civil servants who refused to work for the military and have been on strike from early February until today; motivated by the youth and manufacturing workers who took to the streets in the first week after the coup to protest the military dictatorship. It is truly a dawning of new spring that not only seeks to overthrow military dictatorship but which challenges nationalistic and patriarchal social orders.

The revolution has adapted its tactics over the past year but has not wavered in its commitment and mobilisation. In the immediate days after the coup, the people expressed their outrage in a deafening display of anger banging pots and pans nightly in unison across the country. A ritual which continued for many months. Within the first week people in their tens of thousands took to the streets in mass protests. The general strike continued and the number of workers in both public and private sectors refusing to work for the military grew in numbers and steadfastness. Protesters started to question their education, the narratives they had been fed and believed. They openly expressed their regret over their silence and thereby complicity in the decades of military oppression against the ethnic people of Myanmar including the genocide of the Rohingya.

In the week of International Women's day, women protected their neighbourhoods from incursions by soldiers or police by hanging their sarongs across the streets. Patriarchal beliefs hold that women's clothing is unclean and has the power to strip men of their virility if they walk under them.

When the crackdowns on the protesters intensified in force and barbaric savagery, the real possibility of mass murder of the protesters led to changes of tactics. Some young men and women formed or joined armed groups across the country to combat the military; others took to the streets in flash protests, while farming communities around the country continued daily anti-military marches in their areas. The people continued to refuse to pay their electricity bills and successfully boycotted businesses and products linked to the military, including the national lottery. The calls for international sanctions on businesses associated with the military increased, with some notable successes.

The Democratic Party for a New Society (DPNS) and its youth wing, Youth for a New Society (YNS) have actively participated in the revolution, standing with the people's demands. The political values of "Freedom, Equality and Solidarity" which guide DPNS leave no doubt that any form of dictatorship, including military dictatorship must be opposed and brought down. The imposition of rule by a group of people or an institution and the ensuing authoritarian control of bureaucratic mechanisms blocks any path towards democracy and cannot be tolerated.

DPNS thus stands with the people against dictatorship and authoritarianism. We stand together with the people to defend the rights of all peoples of Burma and to take back the rights which have been so wrongly stolen by the military. With these political and moral stands, DPNS has actively and continuously contributed to the Spring Revolution and will continue to do so until the people's demands are met.

- 1) To abolish all forms of dictatorship including the military dictatorship
- 2) To revoke the 2008 constitution
- 3) To set up interim government
- 4) To establish the federal democratic union

To this end, DPNS and our youth wing, Youth for a New Society (YNS) has actively participated in the Spring Revolution, joining allies from political, cultural and social organisations and groups, across religions and ethnicities. During the period of mass protests, DPNS and YNS have allied with the All Burma Federation of Student Unions (ABFSU), All Burma Federation of Trade Unions (ABFTU), Social Democratic United Front (SDUF), All Burma Young Poets' Union (ABYPU), members of the General Strike Committee, University Muslim Student Network (UMSN, Myanmar); Progressive Muslim Youth Association (PMYA), and Anti-Junta Mass Movement to initiate anti-military movements.

Since April and the change of tactics, members of the GSC have carried out more than 30 flash strikes at random times and areas, aimed at reducing the risks but visually expressing the continued commitment of daring to publicly oppose the military.

This report card provides an overview of the participation of DPNS and YNS in public anti-military demonstrations since the coup. We also acknowledge and respect all the struggles of all the peoples across Burma which are not documented here and stand ready to continue our participation for the success of the Spring Revolution.

February

On the morning of 1 February 2021 the Burma Army, led by General Min Aung Hlaing instigated a coup, detaining the State's leaders including the President, and some elected representatives. Politicians and activists were also arrested. The coup was immediately denounced by The Democratic Party for a New Society (DPNS) and many other organizations. DPNS issued a public statement and gave interviews stating its objection and rejection of the military takeover.

The military declared that the coup was necessary and "constitutional" because according to General Min Aung Hlaing the November 2020 election had been fraudulent.

On 2nd February 2021, the DPNS demanded that the military accept the result of the general election which had clearly represented the will of the people; resulting in a landslide win for the National League of Democracy (NLD) and significant loss of seats to the military's proxy political party, the Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP). In the administrative capital, Naypyidaw, and across the country, civil servants, especially those in the health and education sectors, initiated a civil disobedience movement (CDM) leaving their work stations and refusing to work under the control of the military.. On the evening of Feb 2nd at 8pm, the people of Burma, unanimously expressed their opposition from their homes; banging pots and pans in unison and honking car horns. The anger of the people and the rejection of the takeover could not have been clearer and the nightly ritual continued for many months.

On 4th February 2021, DPNS, citing the political principle which guides the DPNS: “People are fathers, People are mothers”, requested its members to firmly stand together with the people and to mobilize to work with the people for the return to the democratic transition.

In Taungyi, the capital of Shan state; the youth wing of DPNS, Youth for a New Society (YNS) launched a sticker campaign; posting stickers and posters denouncing the coup across the city.

On 5th February 2021, a strike committee under the name “Anti-junta Mass movement (AJMM)” was jointly formed by YNS, the Revolutionary Democratic Vanguard(RDV), Rangoon University Students’ Union (RUSU), Federation of General Workers of Myanmar (FGWS) and the Solidarity Trade Union of Myanmar (STUM).

Feb 6th 2021: 4,000 people take to the streets of Yangon, in protest against the military.

On Feb 6, 2021 the AJMM initiated a street protest in Yangon marching from Parami Sein Gayhar Store, to Hledan junction (closed to Rangoon University Campus) to provide a platform for people to express their desire to denounce the military. About 2,000 people joined the march. In the afternoon, YNS and DPNS joined the All Burma Federation of Student Unions, (ABSFU) marching in downtown Rangoon. An estimated 4,000 people came out on the streets.

By February 7th, public protests had spread across the country, while in Yangon, the number of people joining the marches increased to over 10,000. DPNS and YNS joined a large range of organizations coordinating the protests.

Youth for a New Society (YNS) members speak at the Feb 8th 2021 anti-coup protest under the Myay-Ni-Gone bridge.

On 8th February 2021, DPNS rejects the “offer” to join the military council, the so called State Administration Council (SAC).

DPNS was contacted by the junta to become a member of the State Administrative Council (SAC). Without hesitation, the DPNS rejected this offer of associating and coordinating with this totally illegitimate body. The Shan Nationalities League of Democracy (SNLD) and other political parties also rejected offers.

On 9th February 2021 : “DPNS requests general public”. DPNS issued a public statement calling for members of the police force, soldiers, civil servants, general public and unions to work together for the restoration of democracy in the country and to work hand in hand in pushing the military back to their barracks. In this request, DPNS stressed the need of federal democracy for solidarity among ethnic nationalities and for the positive development of the Union.

These included: ABFSU, RUSU, ABFTU, Young Poets’ Union, Social Democratic United Front (SDUF) and Generation Wave.

This day also marked the first shooting of a civilian protester, a young woman, in Nay-Pyi-daw, who later died.

10th Feb 2021 Anti-coup rally at Sule square in Rangoon. DPNS' Chairperson gave a speech at the rally against the coup and calling for revoking 2008 constitution, building federal democracy and denouncing the military's massacres of Rohingya Muslim-minority in the west of the country.

On 11th and 12th Feb 2021, together with the University Muslim Students' Network-Myanmar (UMSN-Myanmar), Progressive Muslim Youth Association (PMYA), and AJMM, DPNS/YNS co-initiated a collective protest march in Kamaryut and Sanchaung townships, where all forms of discrimination in Burma were denounced. While on the 12th February, DPNS, YNS together with ABFSU , ABFTU and others, co-initiated a collective march and public speeches in Thar-Kay-Ta township of Rangoon division. Meanwhile, in Paungde, Western Pegu division, ABFSU (Paungde), Public Servants' Network and local CSOs, DPNS and YNS co-organized a protest strike.

On this day, the Federal Democracy Committee was founded including DPNS, YNS, pro-democracy ethnic political parties such as SNLD, and political activist organizations of ABFSU, SUDF and CSOs. This committee, with the vision of building a federal democracy guaranteeing equality and self-determination of member states adopted the following five objectives

- 1) to achieve democracy,*
- 2) to abolish the 2008 constitution,*
- 3) to abolish military dictatorship,*
- 4) to form an interim government and*
- 5) to build the Union as a Federal Democracy.*

The Federal Committee is also founding member of General Strike Committee (GSC).

One year on and the future

The above timeline summarizes the involvement of DPNS and YNS in the Spring Revolution. over the past year. DPNS and YNS have collaborated with a wide range of political, civil and workers organizations across religions and ethnicities to maintain the opposition to the coup and to develop new visions for a future federal Burma.

The junta has used multiple tactics to terrorize the population, both physically and psychologically including 12,009 politically motivated arrests, and 1,526 targeted killings as well as causing the death of many villagers through land and air strikes. Killings have been unspeakably gruesome; and children have not been spared. People going about their daily routines have been targetted. Nowhere and no-one can ever be sure of their safety. It is clearly designed to break the will of the people, to silence the people into submission. While it may have succeeded in keeping tens of thousands of people from marching on the streets; it has not succeeded in quelling the anger and the resistance or in silencing the people. The population continues to defy the military rule by a wide range of means, including refusing to allow their money to go into the military coffers by boycotting the payment of taxes and electricity and refusing to buy products from businesses associated with the military. The CDM movement continues with over 400,000 civil servants still on strike, thus effectively crippling the bureaucracy of Burma. Public displays of anger have changed from mass protests to flash strikes and will continue to adapt and change but will continue. The DPNS and YNS commit to engaging across sectors, ethnicities and religions to end the military dictatorship and build a new federal union. DPNS was formed in 1988, outlawed in 1990, re-registered in 2014, gone underground again in 2021. We have never given up and never will, never been silenced and never will be. As YNS has demonstrated in their activism and commitment there will always be youth for a new society.
